SYNOPSIS.

Part I.

CHAPTER I.—Adventurous and reckless, rather than criminal, and excited by liquor, Curly Flandrau and his chum, Mac, both practically mere boys, become involved in a horse-stealing adventure. Disposing of the stolen stock in the town of Saguache, Ariz., the band separates, Curly and his partner staying in town. They are awakened and told a posse is in town in pursuit of them. They elude their pursuers. Overtaken next day, Mac is killed by the posse and Curly made captive, after he has shot one and himself been wounded. The man shot is Luck Cullison.

CHAPTER II.—Cullison's friends, all cattlemen, determine to lynch Curly as an example to cattle thieves. With the rope around his neck he is saved by the intervention of Kate Cullison, Luck's daughter.

CHAPTER III.—His wound dressed, and further violence not apprehended, Curly is sent for by Cullison. He questions the boy concerning a notorious outlaw, Soapy Stone, real leader of the rustlers who had been Curly's undoing. Flandrau learns that Soapy Stone is Cullison's bitter enemy and exercises a baleful influence over the ex-sheriff's son Sam, who has quarreled with his father. Cullison goes bail for Curly.

CHAPTER IV.—Curly rescues Soapy Stone from a bear trap into which he has stumbled, and discovers that the outlaw is young Sam's rival for the hand of Laura London. She gives Curly a note to deliver to Sam, and Flandrau and Stone set out for the latter's ranch.

CHAPTER V.—There Curly meets his companions of the rustling expedition and delivers Laura's note to Sam. Young Cullison believes Stone is his friend and says he will stick by him. Flandrau sees some move is being planned and becomes convinced it is train robbery. Sam Loves the ranch to go to Saguache. Curly accompanies him.

CHAPTER VI.—Eavesdropping at a meeting place, Curly hears Stone and his lieutenant, Lute Blackwell, arrange to hold up the train at a crossing known as Tin Cup, and after the robbery shoot young Cullison and leave his body on the scene, Stone thus gluting his revenge on the ex-sheriff through his son's death and disgrace. Curly is accused by Stone of being a spy of Luck Cullison's. They are separated, but part with the understanding that their next meeting will mean a fight to the death. Curly makes a confidant of Dick Maloney, cattleman, and they inform Luck Cullison of Stone's plot against his son.

Part II.

CHAPTER I.—After an all-night session at the Roundup club, in which Cullison has lost heavily, there is an exchange of sharp words between Luck and a sheepman, Cass Fendrick, with whom Cullison has a feud.

CHAPTER II.—Saguache is electrified by the news of the holdup of express messengers, the bandits securing $20,000. Cullison pays his poker debts, and shortly afterward Mackenzie and Alex Flandrau, his closest friends, learn he is suspected of the express robbery, his hat having been found on the scene and he being missing.

CHAPTER III.—Kate goes to Saguache for a consultation with Mackenzie, Alex Flandrau and Curly. All are convinced of Luck's innocence. The sheriff reveals that besides the finding of Cullison's hat, and his payment of his debts, Cass Fendrick had seen the robber and is almost certain it was Luck. Cullison is about to enter a homestead claim which will practically put Fendrick out of business.

CHAPTER IV.—Kate's shrewdness reveals how Cullison had taken Fendrick's hat, when he left the Roundup club, and suspicion points strongly to a frameup on Fendrick's part and to his being responsible for Luck's disappearance. The sheriff receives a series of notes turning on the "Jack of Hearts." Curly finds a cigar store by that name and secures evidence that the proprietress, Mrs. Wylie, knows what happened to Luck.

CHAPTER V.—In the cellar of the cigar store Flandrau finds a cipher message left by Cullison, and follows the scent. Luck is held prisoner by Fendrick and Blackwell in a sheep herder's cabin in the mountains. Fendrick wants him to sign a relinquishment of his homestead rights, conditional to his release.

CHAPTER VI.—Uneasy over the possible results of his kidnaping of the cattleman, Fendrick tells Kate Cullison enough of the story to induce her to accompany him to her father. Cullison, fearing for his daughter's safety should she be left at the mercy of Blackwell, signs the relinquishment and accompanies Kate home.

CHAPTER VII.

An Arrest.

After half a week in the saddle Lieutenant Bucky O'Connor of the Arizona rangers and Curly Flandrau reached Saguache, tired and travel-stained. They had combed the Rincons without having met hide or hair of the men they wanted. Early next morning they would leave town again and this time would make Soapy Stone's horse ranch.

After reaching town the first thing each of them did was to take a bath, the second to get shaved. From the barber shop they went to the best restaurant in Saguache. Curly was still busy with his pie a la mode when Burridge Thomas, United States land commissioner for that district, took the seat opposite and told to O'Connor a most interesting piece of news.

They heard him to an end without interruption. Then Curly spoke one word. "Fendrick."

"Yes, sir. Cass Fendrick. Came in about one o'clock and handed me the relinquishment just as I've been telling you."

"Then filed on the claim himself, you said."

"Yes, took it up himself."

"Sure the signature to the relinquishment was genuine?"

"I'd take oath to it. As soon as he had gone I got out the original filing and compared the two. Couldn't be any possible mistake. Nobody could have forged the signature. It is like Luck himself, strong and forceful and decided."

Bucky rose. "See you later, Curly. Sorry I have to hurry, Mr. Thomas, but I've thought of something I'll have to do right away."

Bucky followed El Molino street to the old plaza and cut across it to the Hotel Wayland. Among the arrivals of the day was the entry he had hoped to see:

"Cass Fendrick, C. F. Ranch, Arizona."

The room that had been assigned to him was 212.

O'Connor turned away and went up the stairs, ignoring the elevator. On the second floor he found 212. In answer to his knock a voice said "Come in." Opening the door, he stepped in, closed it behind him and looked at the man lying in his shirt sleeves on the bed.

"Evening, Cass."

Fendrick put down his newspaper, but did not rise. "Evening Bucky."

Their eyes held to each other with the level even gaze of men who recognize a worthy antagonist.

"I've come to ask a question or two."

"Kick them out."

"First, I would like to know what you paid Luck Cullison for his Del Oro claim."

"You better ask Cullison. The law says that if a man sells a relinquishment he can't file on another claim. If he surrenders it for nothing he can. Now, Luck may have notions of filing on another claim. You can see that we'll have to take it for granted he gave me the claim."

It was so neat an answer and at the same time so complete a one that O'Connor could not help appreciating it. He smiled and tried again.

"That leaves me only one thing to do. You're under arrest."

"For what?" demanded the sheepman sharply.

"For abducting Luck Cullison and holding him prisoner."

Lazily Cass drawled a question. "Are you right sure Cullison ain't at home attending to his business?"

"Has he come back?"

"Maybe so. I'm not Luck Cullison's keeper."

Bucky thought he understood. In return for the relinquishment Cullison had been released. Knowing Luck as he did, it was hard for him to see how pressure enough had been brought to bear to move him.

"May I use your 'phone?" he asked.

"Help yourself."

O'Connor got the Circle C on long distance. It was the clear contralto of a woman that answered his "Hello!"

"Is this Miss Cullison?" he asked. Almost at once he added: "O'Connor of the rangers is speaking. I've heard your father is home again. Is that true?"

An interval following during which the ranger officer was put into the role of a listener. His occasional "Yes—Yes—Yes" punctuated the rapid murmur that reached Fendrick.

Presently Bucky asked a question. "On his way to town now?"

Again the rapid murmur.

"I'll attend to that, Miss Cullison. I am in Fendrick's room now. Make your mind easy."

Bucky hung up and turned to the sheepman. "Cullison is headed for town and his daughter is afraid he is on the warpath against you. You and Luck mustn't meet yet. Get out of here and hunt cover in the hills for a few days. You know why better than I do."

"How can I when I'm under arrest?" Fendrick mocked.

"You're not under arrest. Miss Cullison says her father has no charge to bring against you. So you can light a shuck soon as you want to."

"Which won't be in any hurry."

"Don't make any mistake. Luck Cullison is a dangerous man when he is roused."

The sheepman looked at the ranger with opaque stony eyes. "If Luck Cullison is looking for me he is liable to find me, and he won't have to go into the hills to hunt me either."

Bucky understood perfectly. According to the code of the frontier no man could let himself be driven from town by the knowledge that another man was looking for him with a gun. There are in the Southwest now many thousands who do not live by the old standard, who are anchored to law and civilization as a protection against primitive passions. But Fendrick was not one of these. He was an aspirant to leadership among the tough hard-bitten denizens of the sunbaked desert. That being so, he had to see his feud out to a fighting finish if need be.

"There are points about this case you have overlooked," Bucky told him.

"Maybe so. But the important one that sticks out like a sore thumb is that no man living can serve notice on me to get out of town because he is coming on the shoot."

"Luck didn't serve any such notice. All his daughter knows is that he is hot under the collar. Look at things reasonably, Cass. You've caused that young lady a heap of trouble already. Are you going to unload a lot more on her just because you want to be pigheaded? Only a kid struts around and hollers 'Who's afraid?' No, it's up to you to pull out, not because of Luck Cullison but on account of his daughter. Seems to me a white man wouldn't make her any more worry."

"It's because I am a white man that I can't dodge a fight when it's stacked up for me, Bucky. I tell you straight I'm going to see it out."

Bucky's jaw clamped. "Not if I know it. You're under arrest."

Fendrick set up in surprise. "What for?" he demanded angrily.

"For robbing the W. & S. Express company."

"H——, Bucky. You don't believe that."

"Never mind what I believe. There's some evidence against you—enough to justify me."

"I won't stand for it. That ain't square."

"You'll stand for it, my friend. I gave you a chance to clear out and you wouldn't take it."

There came a knock on the door. It opened to admit Luck Cullison. He shut it and put his back to it, while his eyes, hard as hammered iron, swept past the officer to fix on Fendrick.

The latter rose quickly from the bed, but O'Connor flung him back.

"Don't forget you're my prisoner."

"He's your prisoner, is he?" This was a turn of affair for which Luck was manifestly unprepared: "Well, I've come to have a little settlement with him."

Fendrick, tense as a coiled spring, watched him warily. "Can't be any too soon to suit me."

Clear cut as a pair of scissors through paper Bucky snapped out his warning. "Nothing stirring, gentlemen. I'll shoot the first man that makes a move."

"Are you in this Bucky?" asked Cullison evenly.

"You're right I am. He's my prisoner."

"What for?"

"For robbing the W. & S."

Luck's face lit. "Have you evidence enough to cinch him?"

"Not enough yet. But I'll take no chances on his getting away."

The cattleman's countenance reflected his thoughts as his decision hung in the balance. He longed to pay his debt on the spot. But on the other hand he had been a sheriff himself. As an outsider he had no right to interfere between an officer and his captive. Besides, if there was a chance to send Fendrick over the road that would be better than killing. It would clear up his own reputation, to some extent under a cloud.

"All right, Bucky. If the law wants him I'll step aside for the time."

The sheepman laughed in his ironic fashion. His amusement mocked them both. "Most as good as a play of the movies, ain't it? But we'd ought all to have our guns out to make it

Laissez-Faire.

Laissez-faire means letting alone; a general noninterference with individual freedom of action; the let-alone principle of policy of the government and political economy. The term was first used in France to designate the principle of political economy which would leave industry and trade absolutely free from taxation and restriction by government except so far as required by public peace and order. It has since been extended to include noninterference with any guiltless exercise of the individual will.

History Repeats Itself.

Briggs and Fowler were talking of the great wars fought in the days when the world was considerably younger. "You know," said Briggs "it always seems to me that those old warriors were very much like our modern financiers." "What do you mean?" asked Fowler. "Well they were always investing some one else's capital, weren't they?"

realistic."

Bucky O'Connor and his prisoner swung down the street side by side and turned in at the headquarters of the rangers. The officer switched on the light, shut the door, and indicated a chair.

Relaxed in his chair, Fendrick spoke with rather elaborate indolence.

"What's your evidence, Bucky? What have you got that ties me to the W. & S. robbery?"

"Why, that hat play, Cass. You let on you had shot Cullison's hat off his head while he was making his getaway. Come to find out you had his hat in your possession all the time."

"Does that prove I did it myself?"

"Looks funny you happened to be right there while the robbery was taking place and that you had Luck's hat with you."

The sleepy tiger look lay warily in the sheepman's eyes. "That's what the dictionaries call coincidence, Bucky."

"I've a notion it will take some explaining."

"Confidentially?"

"Confidentially what?"

"The explanation. You won't use it against me?"

"Not if you weren't in the hold-up."

"I wasn't. This is the way it happened: You know Cullison was going to prove up on that Del Oro claim on Thursday. He had me beat. I couldn't see any way out but to eat crow and offer a compromise. It was up to me to hunt Luck up and see what he would do. His hat gave me an excuse to call. So I started out and came round the corner of San Mateo street just in time to see the robber pull out. Honest, the fellow did shape up a little like Luck. Right then I got the darned fool notion of mixing him up in it. I threw his hat down and shot a hole in it, then unlocked the door of the express office carrying the hat in my hand. That's all there was to it."

"Pretty low-down trick, wasn't it, to play on an innocent man?"

"He was figuring to do me up. I don't say it was exactly on the square, but I was sore at him clear through. I wanted to get him into trouble."

Bucky reflected, looking at the long ash on his cigar. "The man that made the raid of the W. & S. shaped up like Luck, you say?"

"In a general way."

The ranger looked quietly at Fendrick. "Who was the man, Cass?"

"I thought I told you—"

"You did. But you lied. It was a moonlight night. And there's an arc light at that corner. By your own story, the fellow took his mask off as he swung to his horse. You saw his face just as distinctly as I see yours now."

"No, I reckon not," Fendrick grinned.

"Meaning you won't tell?"

"That's not how I put it, Bucky. You're the one that says I recognized him. Come to think of it, I'm not sure the fellow didn't wear his mask till he was out of sight."

"I am. The mask was found just outside the office where the man dropped it before he got into the saddle."

"So?"

"That's not all. Curly and I found something else, too—the old shirt from which the cloth was cut. And I have a witness who saw a man shove that old shirt down in the barrel after tearing a piece off."

"Your witness got a name, Bucky?"

"I'll not mention the name now. If it became too well-known something might happen to my witness."

Fendrick nodded. "You're wise there. She wouldn't be safe, not if a certain man happened to hear what you've just told me."

"I didn't say 'she,' Cass."

"No, I said it. Your witness is Mrs. Wylie."

"Maybe, then, you can guess the criminal, too. I'll ask you a question. Can you tell me where I can find a paroled convict named Blackwell?"

Fendrick shook his head. "Don't know the gentleman. A friend of yours?"

The officer rose, not one whit less amiable. "I didn't expect you to tell me. That's all right. I'll find him. But in the meantime I'll have to lock you up till this thing is settled."

From his inside coat pocket, Fendrick drew a sealed envelope, wrote the date across the front, and handed it to O'Connor.

"Keep this, Bucky, and remember that I gave it to you. Put it in a safe place, but don't open the envelope till I give the word. Understand?"

"What's back of it?"

"It isn't intended that you should know yet. I'm protecting myself. That's all."

Fendrick rose, and the two men passed into the street.

This Medicine Recommended by a Doctor

DR. J. H. WAGNER

When a doctor uses a medicine himself besides prescribing it to his patients, he must know that it has merit.

This is what Dr. J. H. Wagner, a prominent physician of Skate, Kentucky, has to say about Dr. Hartman's well-known remedy, PE-RU-NA: "I have used PE-RU-NA myself for catarrh and have given it to others for catarrh, trusting after eating and other ailments. It has proved a success in all cases, with old and young men and women. All speak well of PE-RU-NA. It is the best of all tonics."

Dr. Wagner, out of the fullness of his own personal experience, for the good of all sick and suffering, recommends a medicine which he knows to be good. You may be sure a doctor would not endanger his professional reputation by endorsing PE-RU-NA unless satisfied beyond a doubt of its value.

Whether your trouble be a cough or a cold, or a more subtle catarrhal affection of the stomach, bowels or other organs, give PE-RU-NA a trial. The immediate improvement which you will see will satisfy beyond a doubt that PE-RU-NA is what you need.

PE-RU-NA may be purchased anywhere in tablet or liquid form.

NOTE (You can save one-fourth on your soap if you buy several months supply in advance and let it dry, each cake will last one-fourth longer)

Gray, faded hair turned beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night, is a reality, if you'll take the trouble to mix sage tea and sulphur, but what is the use, you get a large bottle of ready-to-use tonic, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at drug stores here. Millions of bottles of "Wyeth's" are sold annually, says a well-known druggist, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has happened.

You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Those whose hair is graying, becoming faded, or streaked, just a few applications restores it to its natural color and beauty, and besides it is splendid for dandruff, itching scalp, and for dry, scraggy hair. You will have a surprise awaiting them, because after just one application the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth, gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with the Sage and Sulphur tonight and you'll be amazed at your youthful appearance and the real beauty and healthy condition of your hair within a few days. Inquiry at drug stores here shows that they all sell lots of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" and the folks using it are enthusiastic. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash poisons and toxins from system before putting food into stomach.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the alimentary canal before eating more food.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside bathing.

HOLLAND WILL FLATLY REFU ENTENTE DEMAND FOR KAIS

TEXT OF REPLY NOT YET ANNOUNCED TO PUBLIC

PARIS, Jan. 23—Definite information was received here this afternoon that the Dutch government's reply to the Supreme Council's request for extradition of the former Kaiser will be a refusal. The reply had not been received here up to a late hour this afternoon.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 23—The Dutch government reply to the Allied note demanding surrender of the former Kaiser is a flat refusal it was reported here today. The reply, it was said, has been dispatched to Paris.

Public and press unanimously took it for granted the government would not comply with the extradition demand basing its contention on legal obstructions. One newspaper article declared Holland would be serving civilization in refusing "and in the future it would not be regretted by anybody."

PARIS, Jan. 23—The Dutch legation here today denied a report that it has received the reply of the Holland government to the Allied note demanding the extradition of the former Kaiser.

DEATH BRINGS PARDON FOR "JIMMIE" BOYLE, BILLY WHITLA'S KIDNAPPER

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 23—"Jimmie" Boyle, kidnapper of Billy Whitla, completed his life sentence in the Western Penitentiary today. Double pneumonia, with which the model prisoner has been suffering for the past few days brought him the pardon which the state refused. Death came at 1:08 this afternoon. Seven months ago, his pretty wife, Mrs. Helen Boyle, who was sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary was released after serving 10 years of the sentence. During his confinement Jimmie had no visitor only his wife who when she was freed, vowed never to return to see Jimmie. Boyle is a native of New Castle, Pa.

Early in 1909 Billy Whitla, son of a prominent Sharon, Pa., lawyer, was kidnapped and taken to Cleveland where he was held for ten days for a ransom of $10,000. Boyle and his wife were arrested charged with the kidnapping. All but $1,000 of the ransom money was recovered.

RAILROAD MEN TELL HINES HE MUST ANSWER DEMANDS BY NEXT THURSDAY

CLEVELAND Jan. 23—Officials of the Brothernood of Railway Trainmen will request a detailed answer to their wage increase demands from the Railroad Administration next Thursday, Wm. G. Lee. President of the Trainmen said here today. He has asked Director General Hines for a reply by that date. "The men are pressing us too hard to hold on any longer," Lee said. "We were asked to wait a reasonable length of time with the expectation of a decrease in the cost of living. A reasonable time has elapsed and the cost of living has gone higher."

PALMER TO BE QUIZZED ON HIS VIEWS ON PROPOSED SEDITION MEASURE

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23—The House Rules Committee will insist upon the appearance of Attorney General Palmer before it to explain his position with regard to the sedition legislation, several members today indicated. Palmer has personally visited Chairman Campbell and has asked to be the first witness in the court of sedition legislation, Campbell said today.

CO-OPERATIVE BANK IS NEW LABOR PLAN

CLEVELAND, Jan. 23—Cleveland labor may remove its deposits of $14,000,000 from the local banks and launch a co-operative bank by its action, Wm. G. Stone, Grand Chairman of the Railroad Locomotive Engineers said today. "This $14,000,000 might just as well work for us," he said. Stone said he believed a co-operative bank may be possible by the end of this year."

EDITORIAL.

LODGE'S OPPORTUNITY

The treaty debate has become a national disgrace. Rather than being an honest effort of sincere men to arrive at an agreement it is being made the battle ground of men's political destiny. While these men lunge and parry for partisan leadership the nation waits for real reconstruction which can come only after the treaty is once and for all disposed of.

Senator Lodge and President Wilson have been the central figures in this business of "fiddling while Rome burns." Both are obstinate and selfish in their desires and demands. Both seem to have lost sight of the fact that the real desires of the people with regard to the treaty and the league of nations will be thunderously acclaimed at the polls in the national elections to come and that the adamantine stand assumed by them at this time is purely personal with them.

Rumor today has it that a compromise within the bi-partisan conference is within reach. Let us hope that it is true and that Lodge and Wilson have come to see the light and have been big enough to compose their differences.

Senator Lodge should pay no attention to the rantings of Borah and Johnson at this time. He has an opportunity to prove his calibre.

The Progress still reserves its opinion as to the efficacy of the league but the Wilson-Lodge spectacle is disgusting.

ROADS WILL BE BUILT ACCORDING TO SCHEDULE

'Squire John M. Bain, Secretary of the Clearfield County Good Roads Association arrived home today from a visit to the State Highway Department representing the County Road Association on several matters relating to proposed State road building in Clearfield county.

One of the matters on Secretary Bain's schedule was the proposed two-mile stretch of county and state aid road between Mahaffey and McGee's Mills which had been decided upon by the County Commissioners and Highway Department last year, but which had been held up after surveys were made on account of some difficulty regarding railroad grade crossings.

Mr. Bain was informed by Highway Commissioner Sadler that the arrangement for a County and State aid road at the point mentioned had been reconsidered and the former arrangement cancelled. This was due to the fact that the Highway Department decided to take over Route 62 leading from Curwensville to Ebensburg as one of the primary routes to be constructed entirely by the State.

This will necessitate a change of plans on the part of the County Commissionrs for this year, providing, of course, the present board feels like carrying out the contracts or promises made by the old board last year. Under that plan three miles of the Osceola-Madera road was to have been constructed in addition to the two mile stretch between Mahaffey and McGee's This should make two miles of County and State aid road available for some other section of the county.

Route No. 62, which has thus been made a primary route, will extend from Curwensville, up the river through Lumber City, Mahaffey, McGees, Burnside, Cherrytree, Barnesboro and to Ebensburg. It is expected that the engineers will survey and map the route just as soon as spring opens up.

The Highway Department also made it known that the road from Philipsburg via of Hawk Run, Morrisdale, Allport and Kylertown to Snow Shoe has also been made a primary route.

Borah And Johnson Try To Intimidate Peace Conferees

Reports That Lokge Is Yielding To Compromis1 Brings Acid Remarks From Senate Radicals

WILL OPPOSE HIS LEADERSHIP

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23—Reports that a treaty compromise is about to be reached by the bi-partisan conferees in Senator Lodge's office today aroused the Borah-Johnson group of Senators to a high pitch of indignation against Senator Lodge. They obtained all possible information concerning the secret conference from Senators atending it and then notified Senator Lodge that if he "betrayed them" by agreeing to a compromise proposed they will refuse to recognize him as the party chief and will carry the party schism into the Republican primaries and the Republican National convention, fighting Lodge all the way.

POWHATAN PASSENGERS ARE SOON TRANSFERRED TO ANOTHER VESSEL

NEW YORK, Jan. 23—A wireless message from Captain Randall of the disabled transport Powhatan received here today indicated further trouble may be expected unless a tow vessel with heavier gears than those being used can come to their aid. The message declared the 271 passengers had been transferred to the transport Northern Pacific late last night and said "we must have a tow vessel with gears heavier than 10 inch. Signed Randall."

NAVY DEPARTMENT GIVES ITS SIDE IN CONTROVERSY WITH ADMIRAL SIMS

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23—The Navy Department today was to give its side of the naval award controversy. Members of the Knight Board which revised the recommendations of commanders for decorations were to go before the Hale investigating committee. This board was criticised by Admiral Sims. Secretary Daniels will testify later. By next week the committee is expected to start investigation of the Sims' charges that the Navy Department prolonged the war.

Secretary Bain inquired regarding the possibility of the connecting link on the Clearfield-DuBois primary route being made this year and was informed that contracts for the two pieces in Sandy and Brady townships for which bids will be opened January 27th would be made at that time if the bids for the construction of same were satisfactory to the Department.

So far as the stretch from Curwensville to Luthersburg was concerned the surveys had not been made as yet and while they would no doube be ordered this season nothing definite could be said concerning this section at this time.

The Highway Department contracted for approximately 600 miles of permanent roads on the primary routes of the State last year and contemplate letting contracts for the construction of 800 additional miles during 1920. Of the 600 miles for which contracts were let in 1919 Clearfield County was granted approximately twelve miles and if we receive the same ratio of award out of this year's 800 mile program certainly no section of Clearfield County will have cause to grumble, especially in view of the fact that bids have already been asked for the nearby five mile stretch out of Sandy township adjacent to the city of DuBois.

Highway Commissioner Sadler has thus for scrupulously carried out every promise made to our County Commissioners and Good Roads Association and with the tenacity of purpose of General Grant proposes to fight the road problem of the State out on the lines laid down when he assumed his present exacting position if it "takes all summer" and every summer while he is at the head of the Highway Department. He has his plans mapped out covering his four year term and no "pull, haul or push" by "great" or "near greats"—politically speaking—can hasten or impede one jot or tittle.

Commissioner Sadler proposes conducting the affairs of his great department along careful business lines, and is following out a comprehensive program of permanent construction evolved by competent engineers to solve the immense problem of taking all Pennsylvania "out of the mud" and the sooner politicians and "crushers" big, little and otherwise, get this fact established in their minds the better it will be for their peace of mind and the splendid satisfaction of the entire state. He's on the job, knows the job and is getting results. Let him go to it.

The Highway Department has completed an exhaustive survey of the supply of road building materials available for highway construction in Pennsylvania and knows right down to the finest point of a gnat's whisker just what, when and where this material is available and will let its contracts during the coming year with this matter of availability of building material in mind, and this is another common-sense departure and—if we may say it—foreign to previous Highway Department activities in Pennsylvania.

For illustration, if the survey of the Highway Department shows available road building material in a particular section, or immediately adjacent thereto for, say five miles of road, a contract for that much road will be let in that section, and thus will allow the contractor to secure his material and complete his contract, rather than make two contracts of five miles each for that particular region its with consequent possible securing of but 50 per cent. of the required building material by each contractor and the resultant fifty per cent. completion of the two projects.

Again ye say to al linterested communities, sit tight and feel safe in leaving your sectional road problem in the hands of the broad-gauge business man with all the road problems of the Keystone Commonwealth in his capable hands. Rest assured you and your section will get just what is coming to you and no man or set of men can help or hinder.

It is alright to be alive and on the job for your community, but don't borrow trouble, your turn is bound to come.

ALLEGE SHOW GIRLS WERE ENTERTAINED MOST ROYALLY HERE

A coterie of local "Stage Door Johnnies," a species of two-legged animal which is running its snout into the public gaze at times hereabouts, is alleged to have read those "well-worded advertisements" in one of the town dailies, and while they may not have been of the "best families," which also read that paper, now agree with the editor that "The Gumps" did have a lot of girls who were "graceful, pretty dancers and sweet-voiced singers."

Some of the boys even go so far as to say there were those among them who were not only "graceful and pretty dancers," but high kickers, high rollers and hail fellows well met.

Dame Rumor alleges that following the show a party of "Johnnies" pounced upon a bevy of willing fair ones near the stage exit and proceeded to initiate them into the unsung mysteries of "Clearfield After Dark." We don't know whether the "gossip mongers" were jealous or no, but we do know some fearsome tales are being bruited about and there is said to be have been numerous headaches the "morning after the night before" and those headaches were not all in Clearfield after the show left town on the 8:20 Pennsylvania train. We are in receipt of an anonymous communication which describes an interlocked affectionate sextette which perambulated Market street and Second street during the wee sma' hours, in which the names of the three Johnnies or alleged male part of the sextette are given, but as the remainder are referred to as "Dotty," "Dimples" and "Cutie," we were forced to inter the document and information in our "private morgue" for future reference.

It is said that "red licker" at $20 per quart—$20, count them—figured in the party and there were two quarts at that price purchased locally, 'tis said, from a private dealer after the show was over.

Senator Hindman and his "dry sleuths" will get somebody if they don't look out.

But it was sure some party, shipmates. What?

EAT LESS MEAT IF BACK HURTS

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if Bladder bothers you—Drink lots of water

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

WORRY AND WRINKLES

Despondency is a thing of evil results. Worry produces nothing but wrinkles and wretchedness. Let the reader put a note on her bureau, on her desk, and at the head of her bed, just two words,

"Don't Worry"

Worry is the greatest foe to the happiness of any household. An anxious, despondent face, a fretful, complaining voice, will make every one uncomfortable.

A woman's nerves are more truly the cause of worry than outside troubles. The nerves are to a woman's body the telegraph system which surely warns her of any trouble in the feminine make-up. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the ideal woman's tonic for such conditions. When a woman complains of backache, dizziness or pain—when everything looks black before her eyes—a dragging feeling, with nervousness, she should turn to this "temperance" herbal tonic. It can be obtained in almost every drug store in the land. Put up in tablets or liquid.

WILKES BARRE, PA. "I found Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription very beneficial. I had become all run-down, weak and extremely nervous. I suffered loss of appetite and could not sleep or rest at night. My mother gave me the 'Favorite Prescription' and it built me up and otherwise improved my health. It is an excellent tonic, to worsen and builder of the nervous system. I would advise those who suffer to try it."—MRS. CATHARINE SMITH, 97 Stanton Street.

Good Word for Pussy.

Brave little Bob has received many injunctions to be "manly," the word being used to mean to go about his business heavily and noisily and in a self-respecting manner. The other day Bob's pet cat was suspected of some wrongful misdemeanor and Bob rose to the rescue in a hurry. "I'm sure she never did it, mamma," he exclaimed enthusiastically. "She never does think of acting in such a manner; she is a very manly cat."

Measure of Greatness.

Great men, great events, great epochs, it has been said, grow as we recede from them; and the rate at which they grow in the estimation of men is in some sort a measure of their greatness.—Principal Shairp.

For Dull Mirrors.

If mirrors be very dull and speckled, the following method is excellent: Take a small portion of whiting and add sufficient cold tea to make a paste; rub the glass with warm tea, dry with a soft cloth; rub a little of the paste well on the mirror and polish dry with tissue paper.

To Remove Ink Stains.

Ink stains on white fabrics can be removed with peroxide of hydrogen. Drop it on the stain with a medicine dropper or, if it is a large spot, pour it on slowly from a spoon. As this preparation has a bleaching effect, great care must be exercised if used on colored materials.

READ THE PROGRESS

IN THE LION'S DEN

By GRACE R. OLIN.

(©, 1919, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Lucille, I think you are carrying this affair a little too far." Lucille's father frowned upon her from the depths of his great office chair, and Uncle Rob, her father's brother and partner, frowned a bit himself.

"I quite agree with you in this, John," he said. Of course, the office force might have quaked, or the world of business men been disconcerted, for the firm of Spencer & Spencer were pretty big men and their word carried considerable weight. However, Lucille appeared not to be affected greatly; she gazed down at her slim ankles and smothered a yawn as if a trifle bored.

"Father," her eyes looked into his serenely, "I can't see why you object to Mr. Carter, and besides he's so different from all the rest."

"Different!" John Spencer's tone was almost exasperated. "I can't see wherein he's different. He is simply the fourth ex-soldier your Red Cross work gave you a personal interest in. For each of the four you appealed to me to give them a position. I crowded Carter in rather than disappoint you, though I didn't need him."

"Like the others three, he thanks me by making love to my daughter. The others, although they amused you for a while, soon wearied you, but this fellow evidently possesses some added charm, for you accept his attentions gladly, to all appearances."

"But, father," Lucille was persistent, "Mr. Carter is so different.

"His salary is $25 per, just what the others got," threw in Uncle Rob dryly. "Wouldn't keep you in hats, even."

"He'll get to the top all right," defended Lucille. "You 'lions' in the business world certainly make me tired. You cheer the boys for their valor in fighting. They win the war for you and come back, looking for jobs. They may get the jobs, but right there the heretofore bravos cease. No matter what their heroism, what their sacrifice, the danger past, they are just the poorer class, the class your daughters needn't associate with."

"Lucille," Mr. John Spencer looked somewhat hurt. "Your uncle and I have been in the business a long time. We have struggled and worked hard and kept our noses to the grindstone for years. If we have won the title of 'lions,' we deserve it."

"Hero stuff is all right, but it doesn't pay the rent nor buy groceries, does it? Why, Carter has had two chances to go with other firms. He's a bright fellow, and there is a $5 raise in each case. But, no, the other men didn't have daughters."

"I tell you what I suggested to your father." Uncle Rob leaned over to pat the little hand resting on his desk. "I suggested letting Carter go; not throwing him out without a job, but forcing one of his recent offers upon him."

Her father turned suddenly and pressed a certain button on his desk. "Send Carter in," he said to the red-haired office boy. And the next moment a tall, well-built young man crossed the threshold. "Good morning, Daniel," called Lucille, cheerily.

"Why, Lucille," the young man's face lighted up wonderfully.

"Carter!" John Spencer stopped him with a gesture ere he could cross to Lucille's side. "Just a moment, please; I want a word with you."

"Certainly." Carter stopped courteously by his employer's desk.

"I'm not at all satisfied, young man. I'm going to let you go. Of course, I will see that you get another position; that is understood, but I don't think you have played square with me. Speak out like a man. Do you?"

For an instant Carter's grave blue eyes registered amusement, then he drew himself up soberly.

"I haven't played square with you, sir," he answered. "Of course I've been very honest with your daughter, but my year in the trenches taught me a valuable lesson. You see, 'lions' and German foxes must be approached with caution and a cunning to match their own.

"When I first met Lucille, and found out that you were her father, I realized that if you knew my uncles were Carter & Carter, your most bitter rivals and contestants for the 'lionship honors,' I would have to go slow.

"Lucille and I thought if I could establish myself in your good graces that would be, of course, the first step. Needless to say, my uncles want me with them, especially now as I have some methods of yours to introduce."

"Don't be alarmed, sirs," as Spencer & Spencer clutched at their collars convulsively. "I have drawn up papers ready for your signature, which admit me into the firm. And now, if you'll pardon us, Lucille and I will run off to lunch. Don't forget the papers you are sure to sign, gentlemen. You know, I shall belong to the house, and a house divided against itself shall fall."

Lucille came over softly and put her smooth cheek against her father's.

"Father, you and Uncle Rob know the story about 'Daniel in the lion's den,' don't you?" she asked innocently.

Spencer and Spencer exchanged glances. "Yes, I reckon I remember, all right," Mr. John Spencer assured her; "the mouths of the lions were stopped, if my memory is correct."

The other member of the firm, Mr. Robert Spencer, extended his hand to young Carter, and with the other tilted Lucille's chin.

"Daniel was some boy," he remarked.

Re-Built Stoves

In Many Cases Hard To Tell From New Going Out At Low Prices

In the course of my business I have gathered a lot of stoves. These I have rebuilt. A new door here, new bricks there—in many cases it's hard to tell these stoves from new ones.

Why don't you come and look them over? The one at home may be past repair—new stoves are at prices nearly prohibitive — and there's many a year of service to be gotten out of these.

Prices are "Hoffman prices." That assures you a lower price than usual.

[illegible]-BREAD DOLL

By MILDRED WHITE.

[illegible], 1922, Western Newspaper Union)

[illegible] had a headache and a heart[illegible] it seemed that there was no [illegible] within her four studio walls [illegible] distress. Through her [illegible] memories of past [illegible] of childhood, and the charm [illegible] never failed to relieve—a [illegible] spiced ginger-bread doll. She [illegible] at the recollection [illegible] in her white starched apron, [illegible] fingers fashioning deftly [illegible], while a fretful child lay [illegible]. There were no white-[illegible] ginger-bread women now, [illegible] sadly. Her world [illegible] women of her own kind, [illegible] various careers which [illegible], perhaps, but not the [illegible] enjoyment.

[illegible] very tired, you see so [illegible] may have been over-[illegible] morbid. But childishly [illegible] she longed tonight for [illegible]" of the ginger bread [illegible] wish for anything was, [illegible] the first step towards its [illegible].

[illegible] had written "grandma," [illegible] a relative of her own, [illegible] almost forgotten [illegible] farm rested at the foot [illegible] in summer was a [illegible] of beauty. Selina wondered [illegible] might be like in chill autumn. [illegible] however, awaiting pos-[illegible], seemed to settle her [illegible], while a sense of exhilara-[illegible] into her being with the tang [illegible] fresh air.

[illegible], as she paid [illegible] and walked swiftly up a [illegible] path to the white door [illegible] farmhouse. A little girl, with [illegible] curious eyes, responded to her [illegible].

[illegible] Harvey was away from [illegible], she informed Selina, a sick [illegible] had sent for her in a hurry. [illegible] Harvey had telephoned, the [illegible], that she must not be [illegible] if she was detained until [illegible] hour.

"[illegible]—I am frightened," the little [illegible] said. "I never stay alone, and I [illegible] me supper."

"[illegible] do I," laughed Selina, and [illegible] deposited her bag in the [illegible].

"[illegible] are you?" she asked the child. "[illegible] from the city," the little [illegible]. "The doctor ordered me [illegible] country last spring, and [illegible] Grandma Harvey ever [illegible] used to be my own dad-[illegible]."

"[illegible] is no one else here?" [illegible].

"[illegible]," answered Jane.

"[illegible] supper," she repeated.

[illegible] Harvey said she left some [illegible], but I don't want sand-[illegible]."

[illegible] set about getting supper [illegible] she said briskly; and soon [illegible] the two ate a merry meal.

"[illegible]," Jane said gravely, "in [illegible] to my prayer. I prayed: 'Dear [illegible] send some one quick,' and there [illegible]."

[illegible] bent sympathetically toward [illegible], touched by the tremulous [illegible] her voice.

"[illegible]," she asked, "were you [illegible] for—your mother?"

[illegible] shook her curly head.

"[illegible] had one," she said. "She [illegible] away when she left me in the [illegible]. I'm sorry. Mothers are nice [illegible] with you when you're lone-[illegible] make things for you—"

"[illegible]." Selina's smile was un-[illegible].

"[illegible] you," she asked, "by any [illegible], have a ginger-bread doll?"

"[illegible] Harvey makes ginger [illegible] from this," she said, excitedly. "[illegible] after you'd baked it, you could [illegible] out like a doll!"

[illegible] it happened that a man, leaving [illegible] in the leaf-strewn driveway [illegible] to look through a lighted [illegible] window, saw there in the lamp-[illegible] two interested heads bent over a [illegible] mixture upon the table.

[illegible] dark, curly head belonged to [illegible] small daughter, but the fluffy [illegible] one, when raised presently to [illegible] no object in a pan proved to [illegible] of an attractive young wom-[illegible] entrance was unnoticed un-[illegible] Jane, jumping up from a laugh-[illegible] floor, cried:

"[illegible]! daddy, I'd forgotten that I tel-[illegible] you to come out at once. I [illegible] lonely then you see and [illegible]. But the ginger-bread lady [illegible] made it all right." Selina [illegible], flushed and pretty from her [illegible], waved aside the man's polite [illegible] hand.

"[illegible] are all floury," she explained. [illegible] studio was forgotten as the [illegible] turned to scarlet in the beau-[illegible] country.

[illegible] daddy, also, decided upon an [illegible] with his small daughter, a post-[illegible] vacation.

[illegible] Grandma Harvey watching [illegible] her cheery kitchen, smilingly [illegible] her three guests at evening as [illegible] returned from some tramping ex-[illegible].

"[illegible] think," said Selina one night [illegible] up at the man in the firelight, "[illegible] should have to marry a wid-[illegible] after all my protestations."

"[illegible] I," said Jane's daddy, with a [illegible], "to marry a woman with [illegible] career."

[illegible] should worry about the ca-[illegible]" Jane shrugged, "I'm going [illegible] busy being a ginger-[illegible]."

SYNOPSIS.

Part I.

CHAPTER I.—Adventurous and reckless, rather than criminal, and excited by liquor, Curly Flandrau and his chum, Mac, both practically mere boys, become involved in a horse-stealing adventure. Disposing of the stolen stock in the town of Saguache, Ariz., the band separates, Curly and his partner staying in town. They are awakened and told a posse is in town in pursuit of them. They elude their pursuers. Overtaken next day, Mac is killed by the posse and Curly made captive, after he has shot one and himself been wounded. The man shot is Luck Cullison.

CHAPTER II.—Cullison's friends, all cattlemen, determine to lynch Curly as an example to cattle thieves. With the rope around his neck he is saved by the intervention of Kate Cullison, Luck's daughter.

CHAPTER III.—His wound dressed, and further violence not apprehended, Curly is sent for by Cullison. He questions the boy concerning a notorious outlaw, Soapy Stone, real leader of the rustlers who had been Curly's undoing. Flandrau learns that Soapy Stone is Cullison's bitter enemy and exercises a baleful influence over the ex-sheriff's son Sam, who has quarreled with his father. Cullison goes bail for Curly.

CHAPTER IV.—Curly rescues Soapy Stone from a bear trap into which he has stumbled, and discovers that the outlaw is young Sam's rival for the hand of Laura London. She gives Curly a note to deliver to Sam, and Flandrau and Stone set out for the latter's ranch.

CHAPTER V.—There Curly meets his companions of the rustling expedition and delivers Laura's note to Sam. Young Cullison believes Stone is his friend and says he will stick by him. Flandrau sees some move is being planned and becomes convinced it is train robbery. Sam leaves the ranch to go to Saguache. Curly accompanies him.

CHAPTER VI.—Eavesdropping at a meeting place, Curly hears Stone and his lieutenant, Lute Blackwell, arrange to hold up the train at a crossing known as Tin Cup, and after the robbery shoot young Cullison and leave his body on the scene, Stone thus glutting his revenge on the ex-sheriff through his son's death and disgrace. Curly is accused by Stone of being a spy of Luck Cullison's. They are separated, but part with the understanding that their next meeting will mean a fight to the death. Curly makes a confidant of Dick Maloney, cattleman, and they inform Luck Cullison of Stone's plot against his son.

Part II.

CHAPTER I.—After an all-night session at the Roundup club, in which Cullison has lost heavily, there is an exchange of sharp words between Luck and a sheepman, Cass Fendrick, with whom Cullison has a feud.

CHAPTER II.—Saguache is electrified by the news of the holdup of express messengers, the bandits securing $20,000. Cullison pays his poker debts, and shortly afterward Mackenzie and Alex Flandrau, his closest friends, learn he is suspected of the express robbery, his hat having been found on the scene and he being missing.

CHAPTER III.—Kate goes to Saguache for a consultation with Mackenzie, Alex Flandrau and Curly. All are convinced of Luck's innocence. The sheriff reveals that besides the finding of Cullison's hat, and his payment of his debts, Cass Fendrick had seen the robber and is almost certain it was Luck. Cullison is about to enter a homestead claim which will practically put Fendrick out of business.

CHAPTER IV.—Kate's shrewdness reveals how Cullison had taken Fendrick's hat, when he left the Roundup club, and suspicion points strongly to a frameup on Fendrick's part and to his being responsible for Luck's disappearance. The sheriff receives a series of notes turning on the "Jack of Hearts." Curly finds a cigar store by that name and secures evidence that the proprietress, Mrs. Wylie, knows what happened to Luck.

CHAPTER V.—In the cellar of the cigar store Flandrau finds a cipher message left by Cullison, and follows the scent. Luck is held prisoner by Fendrick and Blackwell in a sheep herder's cabin in the mountains. Fendrick wants him to sign a relinquishment of his homestead rights, conditional to his release.

CHAPTER VI.—Uneasy over the possible results of his kidnaping of the cattleman, Fendrick tells Kate Cullison enough of the story to induce her to accompany him to her father. Cullison, fearing for his daughter's safety should she be left at the mercy of Blackwell, signs the relinquishment and accompanies Kate home.

CHAPTER VII.

An Arrest.

After half a week in the saddle Lieutenant Bucky O'Connor of the Arizona rangers and Curly Flandrau reached Saguache, tired and travel-stained. They had combed the Rincons without having met hide or hair of the men they wanted. Early next morning they would leave town again and this time would make Soapy Stone's horse ranch.

After reaching town the first thing each of them did was to take a bath, the second to get shaved. From the barber shop they went to the best restaurant in Saguache. Curly was still busy with his pie a la mode when Burridge Thomas, United States land commissioner for that district, took the seat opposite and told to O'Connor a most interesting piece of news.

They heard him to an end without interruption. Then Curly spoke one word. "Fendrick."

"Yes, sir. Cass Fendrick. Came in about one o'clock and handed me the relinquishment just as I've been telling you."

"Then filed on the claim himself, you said."

"Yes, took it up himself."

"Sure the signature to the relinquishment was genuine?"

"I'd take oath to it. As soon as he had gone I got out the original filing and compared the two. Couldn't be any possible mistake. Nobody could have forged the signature. It is like Luck himself, strong and forceful and decided."

Bucky rose. "See you later, Curly. Sorry I have to hurry, Mr. Thomas, but I've thought of something I'll have to do right away."

Bucky followed El Molino street to the old plaza and cut across it to the Hotel Wayland. Among the arrivals of the day was the entry he had hoped to see:

"Cass Fendrick, C. F. Ranch, Arizona."

The room that had been assigned to him was 212.

O'Connor turned away and went up the stairs, ignoring the elevator. On the second floor he found 212. In answer to his knock a voice said "Come in." Opening the door, he stepped in, closed it behind him and looked at the man lying in his shirt sleeves on the bed.

"Evening, Cass."

Fendrick put down his newspaper, but did not rise. "Evening Bucky."

Their eyes held to each other with the level even gaze of men who recognize a worthy antagonist.

"I've come to ask a question or two."

"Kick them out."

"First, I would like to know what you paid Luck Cullison for his Del Oro claim."

"You better ask Cullison. The law says that if a man sells a relinquishment he can't file on another claim. If he surrenders it for nothing he can. Now, Luck may have notions of filing on another claim. You can see that we'll have to take it for granted he gave me the claim."

It was so neat an answer and at the same time so complete a one that O'Connor could not help appreciating it. He smiled and tried again.

"That leaves me only one thing to do. You're under arrest."

"For what?" demanded the sheepman sharply.

"For abducting Luck Cullison and holding him prisoner."

Lazily Cass drawled a question. "Are you right sure Cullison ain't at home attending to his business?"

"Has he come back?"

"Maybe so. I'm not Luck Cullison's keeper."

Bucky thought he understood. In return for the relinquishment Cullison had been released. Knowing Luck as he did, it was hard for him to see how pressure enough had been brought to bear to move him.

"May I use your 'phone?" he asked.

"Help yourself."

O'Connor got the Circle C on long distance. It was the clear contralto of a woman that answered his "Hello!"

"Is this Miss Cullison?" he asked. Almost at once he added: "O'Connor of the rangers is speaking. I've heard your father is home again. Is that true?"

An interval following during which the ranger officer was put into the role of a listener. His occasional "Yes—Yes—Yes" punctuated the rapid murmur that reached Fendrick.

Presently Bucky asked a question. "On his way to town now?"

Again the rapid murmur.

"I'll attend to that, Miss Cullison. I am in Fendrick's room now. Make your mind easy."

Bucky hung up and turned to the sheepman. "Cullison is headed for town and his daughter is afraid he is on the warpath against you. You and Luck mustn't meet yet. Get out of here and hunt cover in the hills for a few days. You know why better than I do."

"How can I when I'm under arrest?" Fendrick mocked.

"You're not under arrest. Miss Cullison says her father has no charge to bring against you. So you can light a shuck soon as you want to."

"Which won't be in any hurry."

"Don't make any mistake. Luck Cullison is a dangerous man when he is roused."

The sheepman looked at the ranger with opaque sloby eyes. "If Luck Cullison is looking for me he is liable to find me and he won't have to go into the hills to hunt me either."

Bucky understood perfectly. According to the code of the frontier no man could let himself be driven from town by the knowledge that another man was looking for him with a gun. There are in the Southwest now many thousands who do not live by the old standard, who are abhorred to law and civilization as a protection against primitive passions. But Fendrick was not one of these. He was an aspirant to leadership among the tough hard-bitted denizens of the sunbaked desert. That being so, he had to see his feud out to a fighting finish if need be.

"There are points about this case you have overlooked," Bucky told him.

"Maybe so. But the important one that sticks out like a sore thumb is that no man living can serve notice on me to get out of town because he is coming on the shoot."

"Luck didn't serve any such notice. All his daughter knows is that he is hot under the collar. Look at things reasonably, Cass. You've caused that young lady a heap of trouble already. Are you going to unload a lot more on her just because you want to be pigheaded? Only a kid struts around and hollers 'Who's afraid?' No, it's up to you to pull out, not because of Luck Cullison but on account of his daughter. Seems to me a white man wouldn't make her any more worry."

"It's because I am a white man that I can't dodge a fight when it's stacked up for me, Bucky. I tell you straight I'm going to see it out."

Bucky's jaw clamped. "Not if I know it. You're under arrest."

Fendrick set up in surprise. "What for?" he demanded angrily.

"For robbing the W. & S. Express company."

"H——, Bucky. You don't believe that."

"Never mind what I believe. There's some evidence against you—enough to justify me."

"I won't stand for it. That ain't square."

"You'll stand for it, my friend. I gave you a chance to clear out and you wouldn't take it."

There came a knock on the door. It opened to admit Luck Cullison. He shut it and put his back to it, while his eyes, hard as hammered iron, swept past the officer to fix on Fendrick.

The latter rose quickly from the bed, but O'Connor flung him back.

"Don't forget you're my prisoner."

"He's your prisoner, is he?" This was a turn of affair for which Luck was manifestly unprepared: "Well, I've come to have a little settlement with him."

Fendrick, tense as a coiled spring, watched him warily. "Can't be any too soon to suit me."

Clear cut as a pair of scissors through paper Bucky snapped out his warning. "Nothing stirring, gentlemen. I'll shoot the first man that makes a move."

"Are you in this Bucky?" asked Cullison evenly.

"You're right I am. He's my prisoner."

"What for?"

"For robbing the W. & S."

Luck's face lit. "Have you evidence enough to clinch him?"

"Not enough yet. But I'll take no chances on his getting away."

The cattleman's countenance reflected his thoughts as his decision hung in the balance. He longed to pay his debt on the spot. But on the other hand he had been a sheriff himself. As an outsider he had no right to interfere between an officer and his captive. Besides, if there was a chance to send Fendrick over the road that would be better than killing. It would clear up his own reputation, to some extent under a cloud.

"All right, Bucky. If the law wants him I'll step aside for the time."

The sheepman laughed in his ironic fashion. His amusement mocked them both. "Most as good as a play of the movies, ain't it? But we'd ought all to have our guns out to make it

Laissez-Faire.

Laissez-faire means letting alone; a general noninterference with individual freedom of action; the let-alone principle of policy of the government and political economy. The term was first used in France to designate the principle of political economy which would leave industry and trade absolutely free from taxation and restriction by government except so far as required by public peace and order. It has since been extended to include noninterference with any guiltless exercise of the individual will.

History Repeats Itself.

Briggs and Fowler were talking of the great wars fought in the days when the world was considerably younger. "You know," said Briggs "it always seems to me that those old warriors were very much like our modern financiers." "What do you mean?" asked Fowler. "Well they were always investing some one else's capital, weren't they?"

Stars in a Dream.

To dream of stars is said to have the following meaning: If the stars are clear, Dame Fortune is going to smile upon you, but if they were obscured and dusky, then the reverse may be the case.

Why?

Into the end of the handle of a new toothbrush can be inserted a card with its owner's name.

Find Date Valuable Food.

Dates form the staple food of the Arabs in a large part of Arabia and are served in some form at every meal. Syrup and vinegar are made from old dates, and by those who disregard the teachings of the Koran a kind of brandy is distilled from them. The date pit is ground and fed to the cows and sheep, so that nothing of the precious fruit may be lost. Whole pits are used as beads and counters for the Arab children in their games on the desert sand.

Solitude.

What period do you think I recall most frequently and most willingly in my dreams? Not the pleasures of my youth; they are too rare, too much mingled with bitterness and now too distant. I recall the period of my seclusion, of my solitary walks, of the fleeting but delicious days that I have passed entirely by myself, with my beloved dog, my old cat, with the birds of the field, the hinds of the forest, with all nature and her inconceivable Author.—Rousseau.

Famous English Chimneys.

A "twisted chimney" distinguished an Elizabethan manor house in the ancient town of Buckingham, England, which is to be offered for sale shortly, and the auctioneers assert that the secret of this mode of construction is lost, and that the only other "twisted chimney," and that less perfect, is at Hampton Court.

realistic."

Bucky O'Connor and his prisoner swung down the street side by side and turned in at the headquarters of the rangers. The officer switched on the light, shut the door, and indicated a chair.

Relaxed in his chair, Fendrick spoke with rather elaborate indolence.

"What's your evidence, Bucky? What have you got that ties me to the W. & S. robbery?"

"Why, that hat play, Cass. You let on you had shot Cullison's hat off his head while he was making his get-away. Come to find out you had his hat in your possession all the time."

"Does that prove I did it myself?"

"Looks funny you happened to be right there while the robbery was taking place and that you had Luck's hat with you."

The sleepy tiger look lay warily in the sheepman's eyes. "That's what the dictionaries call coincidence, Bucky."

"I've a notion it will take some explaining."

"Confidentially?"

"Confidentially what?"

"The explanation. You won't use it against me?"

"Not if you weren't in the hold-up."

"I wasn't. This is the way it happened: You know Cullison was going to prove up on that Del Oro claim on Thursday. He had me beat. I couldn't see any way out but to eat crow and offer a compromise. It was up to me to hunt Luck up and see what he would do. His hat gave me an excuse to call. So I started out and came round the corner of San Mateo street just in time to see the robber pull out. Honest, the fellow did shape up a little like Luck. Right then I got the darned fool notion of mixing him up in it. I threw his hat down and shot a hole in it, then unlocked the door of the express office carrying the hat in my hand. That's all there was to it."

"Pretty low down trick, wasn't it, to play on an innocent man?"

"He was figuring to do me up. I don't say it was exactly on the square, but I was sore at him clear through. I wanted to get him into trouble."

Bucky reflected, looking at the long ash on his cigar. "The man that made the raid of the W. & S. shaped up like Luck, you say?"

"In a general way."

The ranger looked quietly at Fendrick. "Who was the man, Cass?"

"I thought I told you."

"You did. But you lied. It was a moonlight night. And there's an arc light at that corner. By your own story, the fellow took his mask off as he swung to his horse. You saw his face just as distinctly as I see yours now."

"No, I reckon not," Fendrick grinned.

"Meaning you won't tell?"

"That's not how I put it, Bucky. You're the one that says I recognized him. Come to think of it, I'm not sure the fellow didn't wear his mask till he was out of sight."

"I am. The mask was found just outside the office where the man dropped it before he got into the saddle."

"So?"

"That's not all. Curly and I found something else, too—the old shirt from which the cloth was cut. And I have a witness who saw a man shove that old shirt down in the barrel after tearing a piece off."

"Your witness got a name, Bucky?"

"I'll not mention the name now. If it became too well known something might happen to my witness."

Fendrick nodded. "You're wise there. She wouldn't be safe, not if a certain man happened to hear what you've just told me."

"I didn't say 'she,' Cass."

"No, I said it. Your witness is Mrs. Wylie."

"Maybe, then, you can guess the criminal, too. I'll ask you a question. Can you tell me where I can find a paroled convict named Blackwell?"

Fendrick shook his head. "Don't know the gentleman. A friend of yours?"

The officer rose, not one whit less amiable. "I didn't expect you to tell me. That's all right. I'll find him. But in the meantime I'll have to lock you up till this thing is settled."

From his inside coat pocket, Fendrick drew a sealed envelope, wrote the date across the front, and handed it to O'Connor.

"Keep this, Bucky, and remember that I gave it to you. Put it in a safe place, but don't open the envelope till I give the word. Understand?"

"What's back of it?"

"It isn't intended that you should know yet. I'm protecting myself. That's all."

Fendrick rose, and the two men passed into the street.

(To be Continued)

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash poisons and toxins from system before putting food into stomach.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels, thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the alimentary canal before eating more food.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside bathing.

This Medicine Recommended by a Doctor

DR. J. H. WAGNER

When a doctor uses a medicine himself besides prescribing it to his patients, he must know that it has merit.

This is what Dr. J. H. Wagner, a prominent physician of Skate, Kentucky, has to say about Dr. Hartman's well-known remedy, PE-RU-NA: "I have used PE-RU-NA myself for catarrh and have given it to others for catarrh, bloating after eating and other ailments. It has proved successful in all cases with old and young men and women. All speak well of PE-RU-NA. It is the best of all tonics."

Dr. Wagner, out of the fullness of his own personal experience, for the good of all sick and suffering, recommends a medicine which he knows to be good. You may be sure a doctor would not endanger his professional reputation by endorsing PE-RU-NA unless satisfied beyond a doubt that PE-RU-NA is what it claims to be.

Whether your trouble be a cough or a cold, or a more subtle catarrhal effect of the stomach, bowels or other organs, give PE-RU-NA a trial. The immediate improvement which you will surely will satisfy beyond a doubt that PE-RU-NA is what you need.

PE-RU-NA may be purchased anywhere in tablet or liquid form.

Why Not Wear Dainty Glasses

Lots of folks hesitate to wear glasses for the first on account of "looks."

When I fit your eyes with vision correcting lenses, I also advise as to the style of glass that best suits your face—some, nose glasses others the temple glasses. There's just as much distinction to glasses as there is a hat.

SYNOPSIS.

Part I.

CHAPTER I.—Adventurous and reckless, rather than criminal, and excited by liquor, Curly Flandrau and his chum, Mac, both practically mere boys, become involved in a horse-stealing adventure. Disposing of the stolen stock in the town of Saguache, Ariz., the band separates, Curly and his partner staying in town. They are awakened and told a posse is in town in pursuit of them. They elude their pursuers. Overtaken next day, Mac is killed by the posse and Curly made captive, after he has shot one and himself been wounded. The man shot is Luck Cullison.

CHAPTER II.—Cullison's friends, all cattlemen, determine to lynch Curly as an example to cattle thieves. With the rope around his neck he is saved by the intervention of Kate Cullison, Luck's daughter.

CHAPTER III.—His wound dressed, and further violence not apprehended, Curly is sent for by Cullison. He questions the boy concerning a notorious outlaw, Soapy Stone, real leader of the rustlers who had been Curly's undoing. Flandrau learns that Soapy Stone is Cullison's bitter enemy and exercises a baleful influence over the ex-sheriff's son Sam, who has quarreled with his father. Cullison goes bail for Curly.

CHAPTER IV.—Curly rescues Soapy Stone from a bear trap into which he has stumbled, and discovers that the outlaw is young Sam's rival for the hand of Laura London. She gives Curly a note to deliver to Sam, and Flandrau and Stone set out for the latter's ranch.

CHAPTER V.—There Curly meets his companions of the rustling expedition and delivers Laura's note to Sam. Young Cullison believes Stone is his friend and says he will stick by him. Flandrau sees some move is being planned and becomes convinced it is train robbery. Sam Loves the ranch to go to Saguache. Curly accompanies him.

CHAPTER VI.—Eavesdropping at a meeting place, Curly hears Stone and his lieutenant, Lute Blackwell, arrange to hold up the train at a crossing known as Tin Cup, and after the robbery shoot young Cullison and leave his body on the scene, Stone thus gluting his revenge on the ex-sheriff through his son's death and disgrace. Curly is accused by Stone of being a spy of Luck Cullison's. They are separated, but part with the understanding that their next meeting will mean a fight to the death. Curly makes a confidant of Dick Maloney, cattleman, and they inform Luck Cullison of Stone's plot against his son.

Part II.

CHAPTER I.—After an all-night session at the Roundup club, in which Cullison has lost heavily, there is an exchange of sharp words between Luck and a sheepman, Cass Fendrick, with whom Cullison has a feud.

CHAPTER II.—Saguache is electrified by the news of the holdup of express messengers, the bandits securing $20,000. Cullison pays his poker debts, and shortly afterward Mackenzie and Alex Flandrau, his closest friends, learn he is suspected of the express robbery, his hat having been found on the scene and he being missing.

CHAPTER III.—Kate goes to Saguache for a consultation with Mackenzie, Alex Flandrau and Curly. All are convinced of Luck's innocence. The sheriff reveals that besides the finding of Cullison's hat, and his payment of his debts, Cass Fendrick had seen the robber and is almost certain it was Luck. Cullison is about to enter a homestead claim which will practically put Fendrick out of business.

CHAPTER IV.—Kate's shrewdness reveals how Cullison had taken Fendrick's hat, when he left the Roundup club, and suspicion points strongly to a frameup on Fendrick's part and to his being responsible for Luck's disappearance. The sheriff receives a series of notes turning on the "Jack of Hearts." Curly finds a cigar store by that name and secures evidence that the proprietress, Mrs. Wylie, knows what happened to Luck.

CHAPTER V.—In the cellar of the cigar store Flandrau finds a cipher message left by Cullison, and follows the scent. Luck is held prisoner by Fendrick and Blackwell in a sheep herder's cabin in the mountains. Fendrick wants him to sign a relinquishment of his homestead rights, conditional to his release.

CHAPTER VI.—Uneasy over the possible results of his kidnaping of the cattleman, Fendrick tells Kate Cullison enough of the story to induce her to accompany him to her father. Cullison, fearing for his daughter's safety should she be left at the mercy of Blackwell, signs the relinquishment and accompanies Kate home.

CHAPTER VII.

An Arrest.

After half a week in the saddle Lieutenant Bucky O'Connor of the Arizona rangers and Curly Flandrau reached Saguache, tired and travel-stained. They had combed the Rincons without having met hide or hair of the men they wanted. Early next morning they would leave town again and this time would make Soapy Stone's horse ranch.

After reaching town the first thing each of them did was to take a bath, the second to get shaved. From the barber shop they went to the best restaurant in Saguache. Curly was still busy with his pie a la mode when Burridge Thomas, United States land commissioner for that district, took the seat opposite and told to O'Connor a most interesting piece of news.

They heard him to an end without interruption. Then Curly spoke one word. "Fendrick."

"Yes, sir. Cass Fendrick. Came in about one o'clock and handed me the relinquishment just as I've been telling you."

"Then filed on the claim himself, you said."

"Yes, took it up himself."

"Sure the signature to the relinquishment was genuine?"

"I'd take oath to it. As soon as he had gone I got out the original filing and compared the two. Couldn't be any possible mistake. Nobody could have forged the signature. It is like Luck himself, strong and forceful and decided."

Bucky rose. "See you later, Curly. Sorry I have to hurry, Mr. Thomas, but I've thought of something I'll have to do right away."

Bucky followed El Molino street to the old plaza and cut across it to the Hotel Wayland. Among the arrivals of the day was the entry he had hoped to see:

"Cass Fendrick, C. F. Ranch, Arizona."

The room that had been assigned to him was 212.

O'Connor turned away and went up the stairs, ignoring the elevator. On the second floor he found 212. In answer to his knock a voice said "Come in." Opening the door, he stepped in, closed it behind him and looked at the man lying in his shirt sleeves on the bed.

"Evening, Cass."

Fendrick put down his newspaper, but did not rise. "Evening Bucky."

Their eyes held to each other with the level even gaze of men who recognize a worthy antagonist.

"I've come to ask a question or two."

"Kick them out."

"First, I would like to know what you paid Luck Cullison for his Del Oro claim."

"You better ask Cullison. The law says that if a man sells a relinquishment he can't file on another claim. If he surrenders it for nothing he can. Now, Luck may have notions of filing on another claim. You can see that we'll have to take it for granted he gave me the claim."

It was so neat an answer and at the same time so complete a one that O'Connor could not help appreciating it. He smiled and tried again.

"That leaves me only one thing to do. You're under arrest."

"For what?" demanded the sheepman sharply.

"For abducting Luck Cullison and holding him prisoner."

Lazily Cass drawled a question. "Are you right sure Cullison ain't at home attending to his business?"

"Has he come back?"

"Maybe so. I'm not Luck Cullison's keeper."

Bucky thought he understood. In return for the relinquishment Cullison had been released. Knowing Luck as he did, it was hard for him to see how pressure enough had been brought to bear to move him.

"May I use your 'phone?" he asked.

"Help yourself."

O'Connor got the Circle C on long distance. It was the clear contralto of a woman that answered his "Hello!"

"Is this Miss Cullison?" he asked. Almost at once he added: "O'Connor of the rangers is speaking. I've heard your father is home again. Is that true?"

An interval following during which the ranger officer was put into the role of a listener. His occasional "Yes—Yes—Yes" punctuated the rapid murmur that reached Fendrick.

Presently Bucky asked a question. "On his way to town now?"

Again the rapid murmur.

"I'll attend to that, Miss Cullison. I am in Fendrick's room now. Make your mind easy."

Bucky hung up and turned to the sheepman. "Cullison is headed for town and his daughter is afraid he is on the warpath against you. You and Luck mustn't meet yet. Get out of here and hunt cover in the hills for a few days. You know why better than I do."

"How can I when I'm under arrest?" Fendrick mocked.

"You're not under arrest. Miss Cullison says her father has no charge to bring against you. So you can light a shuck soon as you want to."

"Which won't be in any hurry."

"Don't make any mistake. Luck Cullison is a dangerous man when he is roused."

The sheepman looked at the ranger with opaque stony eyes. "If Luck Cullison is looking for me he is liable to find me, and he won't have to go into the hills to hunt me either."

Bucky understood perfectly. According to the code of the frontier no man could let himself be driven from town by the knowledge that another man was looking for him with a gun. There are in the Southwest now many thousands who do not live by the old standard, who are anchored to law and civilization as a protection against primitive passions. But Fendrick was not one of these. He was an aspirant to leadership among the tough hard-bitten denizens of the sunbaked desert. That being so, he had to see his feud out to a fighting finish if need be.

"There are points about this case you have overlooked," Bucky told him.

"Maybe so. But the important one that sticks out like a sore thumb is that no man living can serve notice on me to get out of town because he is coming on the shoot."

"Luck didn't serve any such notice. All his daughter knows is that he is hot under the collar. Look at things reasonably, Cass. You've caused that young lady a heap of trouble already. Are you going to unload a lot more on her just because you want to be pigheaded? Only a kid struts around and hollers 'Who's afraid?' No, it's up to you to pull out, not because of Luck Cullison but on account of his daughter. Seems to me a white man wouldn't make her any more worry."

"It's because I am a white man that I can't dodge a fight when it's stacked up for me, Bucky. I tell you straight I'm going to see it out."

Bucky's jaw clamped. "Not if I know it. You're under arrest."

Fendrick set up in surprise. "What for?" he demanded angrily.

"For robbing the W. & S. Express company."

"H——, Bucky. You don't believe that."

"Never mind what I believe. There's some evidence against you—enough to justify me."

"I won't stand for it. That ain't square."

"You'll stand for it, my friend. I gave you a chance to clear out and you wouldn't take it."

There came a knock on the door. It opened to admit Luck Cullison. He shut it and put his back to it, while his eyes, hard as hammered iron, swept past the officer to fix on Fendrick.

The latter rose quickly from the bed, but O'Connor flung him back.

"Don't forget you're my prisoner."

"He's your prisoner, is he?" This was a turn of affair for which Luck was manifestly unprepared: "Well, I've come to have a little settlement with him."

Fendrick, tense as a coiled spring, watched him warily. "Can't be any too soon to suit me."

Clear cut as a pair of scissors through paper Bucky snapped out his warning. "Nothing stirring, gentlemen. I'll shoot the first man that makes a move."

"Are you in this Bucky?" asked Cullison evenly.

"You're right I am. He's my prisoner."

"What for?"

"For robbing the W. & S."

Luck's face lit. "Have you evidence enough to cinch him?"

"Not enough yet. But I'll take no chances on his getting away."

The cattleman's countenance reflected his thoughts as his decision hung in the balance. He longed to pay his debt on the spot. But on the other hand he had been a sheriff himself. As an outsider he had no right to interfere between an officer and his captive. Besides, if there was a chance to send Fendrick over the road that would be better than killing. It would clear up his own reputation, to some extent under a cloud.

"All right, Bucky. If the law wants him I'll step aside for the time."

The sheepman laughed in his ironic fashion. His amusement mocked them both. "Most as good as a play of the movies, ain't it? But we'd ought all to have our guns out to make it

Laissez-Faire.

Laissez-faire means letting alone; a general noninterference with individual freedom of action; the let-alone principle of policy of the government and political economy. The term was first used in France to designate the principle of political economy which would leave industry and trade absolutely free from taxation and restriction by government except so far as required by public peace and order. It has since been extended to include noninterference with any guiltless exercise of the individual will.

History Repeats Itself.

Briggs and Fowler were talking of the great wars fought in the days when the world was considerably younger. "You know," said Briggs "it always seems to me that those old warriors were very much like our modern financiers." "What do you mean?" asked Fowler. "Well they were always investing some one else's capital, weren't they?"

realistic."

Bucky O'Connor and his prisoner swung down the street side by side and turned in at the headquarters of the rangers. The officer switched on the light, shut the door, and indicated a chair.

Relaxed in his chair, Fendrick spoke with rather elaborate indolence.

"What's your evidence, Bucky? What have you got that ties me to the W. & S. robbery?"

"Why, that hat play, Cass. You let on you had shot Cullison's hat off his head while he was making his getaway. Come to find out you had his hat in your possession all the time."

"Does that prove I did it myself?"

"Looks funny you happened to be right there while the robbery was taking place and that you had Luck's hat with you."

The sleepy tiger look lay warily in the sheepman's eyes. "That's what the dictionaries call coincidence, Bucky."

"I've a notion it will take some explaining."

"Confidentially?"

"Confidentially what?"

"The explanation. You won't use it against me?"

"Not if you weren't in the hold-up."

"I wasn't. This is the way it happened: You know Cullison was going to prove up on that Del Oro claim on Thursday. He had me beat. I couldn't see any way out but to eat crow and offer a compromise. It was up to me to hunt Luck up and see what he would do. His hat gave me an excuse to call. So I started out and came round the corner of San Mateo street just in time to see the robber pull out. Honest, the fellow did shape up a little like Luck. Right then I got the darned fool notion of mixing him up in it. I threw his hat down and shot a hole in it, then unlocked the door of the express office carrying the hat in my hand. That's all there was to it."

"Pretty low-down trick, wasn't it, to play on an innocent man?"

"He was figuring to do me up. I don't say it was exactly on the square, but I was sore at him clear through. I wanted to get him into trouble."

Bucky reflected, looking at the long ash on his cigar. "The man that made the raid of the W. & S. shaped up like Luck, you say?"

"In a general way."

The ranger looked quietly at Fendrick. "Who was the man, Cass?"

"I thought I told you—"

"You did. But you lied. It was a moonlight night. And there's an arc light at that corner. By your own story, the fellow took his mask off as he swung to his horse. You saw his face just as distinctly as I see yours now."

"No, I reckon not," Fendrick grinned.

"Meaning you won't tell?"

"That's not how I put it, Bucky. You're the one that says I recognized him. Come to think of it, I'm not sure the fellow didn't wear his mask till he was out of sight."

"I am. The mask was found just outside the office where the man dropped it before he got into the saddle."

"So?"

"That's not all. Curly and I found something else, too—the old shirt from which the cloth was cut. And I have a witness who saw a man shove that old shirt down in the barrel after tearing a piece off."

"Your witness got a name, Bucky?"

"I'll not mention the name now. If it became too well-known something might happen to my witness."

Fendrick nodded. "You're wise there. She wouldn't be safe, not if a certain man happened to hear what you've just told me."

"I didn't say 'she,' Cass."

"No, I said it. Your witness is Mrs. Wylie."

"Maybe, then, you can guess the criminal, too. I'll ask you a question. Can you tell me where I can find a paroled convict named Blackwell?"

Fendrick shook his head. "Don't know the gentleman. A friend of yours?"

The officer rose, not one whit less amiable. "I didn't expect you to tell me. That's all right. I'll find him. But in the meantime I'll have to lock you up till this thing is settled."

From his inside coat pocket, Fendrick drew a sealed envelope, wrote the date across the front, and handed it to O'Connor.

"Keep this, Bucky, and remember that I gave it to you. Put it in a safe place, but don't open the envelope till I give the word. Understand?"

"What's back of it?"

"It isn't intended that you should know yet. I'm protecting myself. That's all."

Fendrick rose, and the two men passed into the street.

This Medicine Recommended by a Doctor

DR. J. H. WAGNER

When a doctor uses a medicine himself besides prescribing it to his patients, he must know that it has merit.

This is what Dr. J. H. Wagner, a prominent physician of Skate, Kentucky, has to say about Dr. Hartman's well-known remedy, PE-RU-NA: "I have used PE-RU-NA myself for catarrh and have given it to others for catarrh, trusting after eating and other ailments. It has proved a success in all cases, with old and young men and women. All speak well of PE-RU-NA. It is the best of all tonics."

Dr. Wagner, out of the fullness of his own personal experience, for the good of all sick and suffering, recommends a medicine which he knows to be good. You may be sure a doctor would not endanger his professional reputation by endorsing PE-RU-NA unless satisfied beyond a doubt of its value.

Whether your trouble be a cough or a cold, or a more subtle catarrhal affection of the stomach, bowels or other organs, give PE-RU-NA a trial. The immediate improvement which you will see will satisfy beyond a doubt that PE-RU-NA is what you need.

PE-RU-NA may be purchased anywhere in tablet or liquid form.

Gray, faded hair turned beautifully dark and lustrous almost over night, is a reality, if you'll take the trouble to mix sage tea and sulphur, but what is the use, you get a large bottle of ready-to-use tonic, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" at drug stores here. Millions of bottles of "Wyeth's" are sold annually, says a well-known druggist, because it darkens the hair so naturally and evenly that no one can tell it has happened.

You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. Those whose hair is graying, becoming faded, or streaked, will have a surprise awaiting them, because after just one application the gray hair vanishes and your locks become luxuriantly dark and beautiful.

This is the age of youth, gray-haired, unattractive folks aren't wanted around, so get busy with the Sage and Sulphur tonight and you'll be amazed at your youthful appearance and the real beauty and healthy condition of your hair within a few days. Inquiry at drug stores here shows that they all sell lots of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur" and the folks using it are enthusiastic. This preparation is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.

WHEN YOU WAKE UP DRINK GLASS OF HOT WATER

Wash poisons and toxins from system before putting food into stomach.

Wash yourself on the inside before breakfast like you do on the outside. This is vastly more important because the skin pores do not absorb impurities into the blood, causing illness, while the bowel pores do.

For every ounce of food taken into the stomach, nearly an ounce of waste material must be carried out of the body. If this waste is not eliminated day by day it quickly ferments and generates poisons, gases and toxins which are absorbed or sucked into the blood stream, through the lymph ducts which should suck only nourishment.

A splendid health measure is to drink, before breakfast each day, a glass of hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it, which is a harmless way to wash these poisons from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels; thus cleansing, sweetening and freshening the alimentary canal before eating more food.

A quarter pound of limestone phosphate costs but very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone an enthusiast on inside bathing.

HOLLAND WILL FLATLY REFU ENTENTE DEMAND FOR KAIS

TEXT OF REPLY NOT YET ANNOUNCED TO PUBLIC

PARIS, Jan. 23—Definite information was received here this afternoon that the Dutch government's reply to the Supreme Council's request for extradition of the former Kaiser will be a refusal. The reply had not been received here up to a late hour this afternoon.

THE HAGUE, Jan. 23—The Dutch government reply to the Allied note demanding surrender of the former Kaiser is a flat refusal it was reported here today. The reply, it was said, has been dispatched to Paris.

Public and press unanimously took it for granted the government would not comply with the extradition demand basing its contention on legal obstructions. One newspaper article declared Holland would be serving civilization in refusing "and in the future it would not be regretted by anybody."

PARIS, Jan. 23—The Dutch legation here today denied a report that it has received the reply of the Holland government to the Allied note demanding the extradition of the former Kaiser.

DEATH BRINGS PARDON FOR "JIMMIE" BOYLE, BILLY WHITLA'S KIDNAPPER

PITTSBURGH, Jan. 23—"Jimmie" Boyle, kidnapper of Billy Whitla, completed his life sentence in the Western Penitentiary today. Double pneumonia, with which the model prisoner has been suffering for the past few days brought him the pardon which the state refused. Death came at 1:08 this afternoon. Seven months ago, his pretty wife, Mrs. Helen Boyle, who was sentenced to 25 years in the penitentiary was released after serving 10 years of the sentence. During his confinement Jimmie had no visitor only his wife who when she was freed, vowed never to return to see Jimmie. Boyle is a native of New Castle, Pa.

Early in 1909 Billy Whitla, son of a prominent Sharon, Pa., lawyer, was kidnapped and taken to Cleveland where he was held for ten days for a ransom of $10,000. Boyle and his wife were arrested charged with the kidnapping. All but $1,000 of the ransom money was recovered.

CLEVELAND, Jan. 23—Cleveland labor may remove its deposits of $14,000,000 from the local banks and launch a co-operative bank by its action, Wm. G. Stone said he believed a co-operative bank may be possible by the end of this year."

LODGE'S OPPORTUNITY

The treaty debate has become a national disgrace. Rather than being an honest effort of sincere men to arrive at an agreement it is being made the battle ground of men's political destiny. While these men lunge and parry for partisan leadership the nation waits for real reconstruction which can come only after the treaty is once and for all disposed of.

Senator Lodge and President Wilson have been the central figures in this business of "fiddling while Rome burns." Both are obstinate and selfish in their desires and demands. Both seem to have lost sight of the fact that the real desires of the people with regard to the treaty and the league of nations will be thunderously acclaimed at the polls in the national elections to come and that the adamantine stand assumed by them at this time is purely personal with them.

Rumor today has it that a compromise within the bi-partisan conference is within reach. Let us hope that it is true and that Lodge and Wilson have come to see the light and have been big enough to compose their differences.

Senator Lodge should pay no attention to the rantings of Borah and Johnson at this time. He has an opportunity to prove his calibre.

The Progress still reserves its opinion as to the efficacy of the league but the Wilson-Lodge spectacle is disgusting.

ROADS WILL BE BUILT ACCORDING TO SCHEDULE

'Squire John M. Bain, Secretary of the Clearfield County Good Roads Association arrived home today from a visit to the State Highway Department representing the County Road Association on several matters relating to proposed State road building in Clearfield county.

One of the matters on Secretary Bain's schedule was the proposed two-mile stretch of county and state aid road between Mahaffey and McGee's Mills which had been decided upon by the County Commissioners and Highway Department last year, but which had been held up after surveys were made on account of some difficulty regarding railroad grade crossings.

Mr. Bain was informed by Highway Commissioner Sadler that the arrangement for a County and State aid road at the point mentioned had been reconsidered and the former arrangement cancelled. This was due to the fact that the Highway Department decided to take over Route 62 leading from Curwensville to Ebensburg as one of the primary routes to be constructed entirely by the State.

This will necessitate a change of plans on the part of the County Commissionrs for this year, providing, of course, the present board feels like carrying out the contracts or promises made by the old board last year. Under that plan three miles of the Osceola-Madera road was to have been constructed in addition to the two mile stretch between Mahaffey and McGee's This should make two miles of County and State aid road available for some other section of the county.

Route No. 62, which has thus been made a primary route, will extend from Curwensville, up the river through Lumber City, Mahaffey, McGees, Burnside, Cherrytree, Barnesboro and to Ebensburg. It is expected that the engineers will survey and map the route just as soon as spring opens up.

The Highway Department also made it known that the road from Philipsburg via of Hawk Run, Morrisdale, Allport and Kylertown to Snow Shoe has also been made a primary route.

Reports That Lokge Is Yielding To Compromis1 Brings Acid Remarks From Senate Radicals

WILL OPPOSE HIS LEADERSHIP

WASHINGTON, Jan. 23—Reports that a treaty compromise is about to be reached by the bi-partisan conferees in Senator Lodge's office today aroused the Borah-Johnson group of Senators to a high pitch of indignation against Senator Lodge. They obtained all possible information concerning the secret conference from Senators atending it and then notified Senator Lodge that if he "betrayed them" by agreeing to a compromise proposed they will refuse to recognize him as the party chief and will carry the party schism into the Republican primaries and the Republican National convention, fighting Lodge all the way.

Secretary Bain inquired regarding the possibility of the connecting link on the Clearfield-DuBois primary route being made this year and was informed that contracts for the two pieces in Sandy and Brady townships for which bids will be opened January 27th would be made at that time if the bids for the construction of same were satisfactory to the Department.

So far as the stretch from Curwensville to Luthersburg was concerned the surveys had not been made as yet and while they would no doube be ordered this season nothing definite could be said concerning this section at this time.

The Highway Department contracted for approximately 600 miles of permanent roads on the primary routes of the State last year and contemplate letting contracts for the construction of 800 additional miles during 1920. Of the 600 miles for which contracts were let in 1919 Clearfield County was granted approximately twelve miles and if we receive the same ratio of award out of this year's 800 mile program certainly no section of Clearfield County will have cause to grumble, especially in view of the fact that bids have already been asked for the nearby five mile stretch out of Sandy township adjacent to the city of DuBois.

Highway Commissioner Sadler has thus for scrupulously carried out every promise made to our County Commissioners and Good Roads Association and with the tenacity of purpose of General Grant proposes to fight the road problem of the State out on the lines laid down when he assumed his present exacting position if it "takes all summer" and every summer while he is at the head of the Highway Department. He has his plans mapped out covering his four year term and no "pull, haul or push" by "great" or "near greats"—politically speaking—can hasten or impede one jot or tittle.

Commissioner Sadler proposes conducting the affairs of his great department along careful business lines, and is following out a comprehensive program of permanent construction evolved by competent engineers to solve the immense problem of taking all Pennsylvania "out of the mud" and the sooner politicians and "crushers" big, little and otherwise, get this fact established in their minds the better it will be for their peace of mind and the splendid satisfaction of the entire state. He's on the job, knows the job and is getting results. Let him go to it.

The Highway Department has completed an exhaustive survey of the supply of road building materials available for highway construction in Pennsylvania and knows right down to the finest point of a gnat's whisker just what, when and where this material is available and will let its contracts during the coming year with this matter of availability of building material in mind, and this is another common-sense departure and—if we may say it—foreign to previous Highway Department activities in Pennsylvania.

For illustration, if the survey of the Highway Department shows available road building material in a particular section, or immediately adjacent thereto for, say five miles of road, a contract for that much road will be let in that section, and thus will allow the contractor to secure his material and complete his contract, rather than make two contracts of five miles each for that particular region its with consequent possible securing of but 50 per cent. of the required building material by each contractor and the resultant fifty per cent. completion of the two projects.

Again ye say to al linterested communities, sit tight and feel safe in leaving your sectional road problem in the hands of the broad-gauge business man with all the road problems of the Keystone Commonwealth in his capable hands. Rest assured you and your section will get just what is coming to you and no man or set of men can help or hinder.

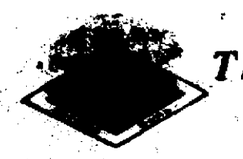

It is alright to be alive and on the job for your community, but don't borrow trouble, your turn is bound to come.

ALLEGE SHOW GIRLS WERE ENTERTAINED MOST ROYALLY HERE

A coterie of local "Stage Door Johnnies," a species of two-legged animal which is running its snout into the public gaze at times hereabouts, is alleged to have read those "well-worded advertisements" in one of the town dailies, and while they may not have been of the "best families," which also read that paper, now agree with the editor that "The Gumps" did have a lot of girls who were "graceful, pretty dancers and sweet-voiced singers."

Some of the boys even go so far as to say there were those among them who were not only "graceful and pretty dancers," but high kickers, high rollers and hail fellows well met.

Dame Rumor alleges that following the show a party of "Johnnies" pounced upon a bevy of willing fair ones near the stage exit and proceeded to initiate them into the unsung mysteries of "Clearfield After Dark." We don't know whether the "gossip mongers" were jealous or no, but we do know some fearsome tales are being bruited about and there is said to be have been numerous headaches the "morning after the night before" and those headaches were not all in Clearfield after the show left town on the 8:20 Pennsylvania train. We are in receipt of an anonymous communication which describes an interlocked affectionate sextette which perambulated Market street and Second street during the wee sma' hours, in which the names of the three Johnnies or alleged male part of the sextette are given, but as the remainder are referred to as "Dotty," "Dimples" and "Cutie," we were forced to inter the document and information in our "private morgue" for future reference.

It is said that "red licker" at $20 per quart—$20, count them—figured in the party and there were two quarts at that price purchased locally, 'tis said, from a private dealer after the show was over.

Senator Hindman and his "dry sleuths" will get somebody if they don't look out.

But it was sure some party, shipmates. What?

Take a glass of Salts to flush Kidneys if Bladder bothers you—Drink lots of water

Eating meat regularly eventually produces kidney trouble in some form or other, says a well-known authority, because the uric acid in meat excites the kidneys, they become overworked; get sluggish; clog up and cause all sorts of distress, particularly backache and misery in the kidney region; rheumatic twinges, severe headaches, acid stomach, constipation torpid liver, sleeplessness, bladder and urinary irritation.

The moment your back hurts or kidneys aren't acting right, or if bladder bothers you, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any good pharmacy; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to normal activity; also to neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts cannot injure anyone; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which millions of men and women take now and then to keep the kidneys and urinary organs clean, thus avoiding serious kidney disease.

KIDNEYS NEVER CAUSE BACKACHE

Rub pain, soreness and stiffness right out with old "St. Jacobs Liniment"

Kidneys cause backache No! They have no nerves, therefore can not cause pain. Listen! Your backache is caused by lumbago, sciatica or a strain, and the quickest relief is soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Liniment." Rub it right on the ache or tender spot, and instantly the pain, soreness, stiffness and lameness disappears. Don't stay crippled! Get a small trial bottle of "St. Jacobs Liniment" from your druggist and limber up. A moment after it is applied you'll wonder what became of the backache, sciatica or lumbago pain. "St. Jacobs Liniment" stops any pain at once. It is harmless and doesn't burn or discolor the skin.

It's the only application to rub on a weak, lame or painful back, or for lumbago, sciatica, neuralgia, rheumatism, sprains or a strain.

WORRY AND WRINKLES

Despondency is a thing of evil results. Worry produces nothing but wrinkles and wretchedness. Let the reader put a note on her bureau, on her desk, and at the head of her bed, just two words,

"Don't Worry"

Worry is the greatest foe to the happiness of any household. An anxious, despondent face, a fretful, complaining voice, will make every one uncomfortable.

A woman's nerves are more truly the cause of worry than outside troubles. The nerves are to a woman's body the telegraph system which surely warns her of any trouble in the feminine make-up. Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the ideal woman's tonic for such conditions. When a woman complains of backache, dizziness or pain—when everything looks black before her eyes—a dragging feeling, with nervousness, she should turn to this "temperance" herbal tonic. It can be obtained in almost every drug store in the land. Put up in tablets or liquid.

WILKES BARRE, PA. "I found Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription very beneficial. I had become all run-down, weak and extremely nervous. I suffered loss of appetite and could not sleep or rest at night. My mother gave me the 'Favorite Prescription' and it built me up and otherwise improved my health. It is an excellent tonic, to worsen and builder of the nervous system. I would advise those who suffer to try it."—MRS. CATHARINE SMITH, 97 Stanton Street.

Good Word for Pussy.

Brave little Bob has been told many injunctions to be "manly," the word being used to mean to go about his business heavily and quietly and in a self-respecting manner. The other day Bob's pet cat was suspected of some wrongful misdemeanor and Bob rose to the rescue in a hurry. "I'm sure she never did it, mamma," he exclaimed enthusiastically. "She never thinks of acting in such a manner; she is a very manly cat."

Measure of Greatness.

Great men, great events, great epochs, it has been said, grow as we recede from them, and the rate at which they grow in the estimation of men is in some sort a measure of their greatness.—Principal Sheirp.

For Dull Mirrors.

If mirrors be very dull and speckled, the following method is excellent: Take a small portion of whiting and add sufficient cold tea to make a paste; rub the glass with warm tea, dry with a soft cloth; rub a little of the paste well on the mirror and polish dry with tissue paper.

To Remove Ink Stains.

Ink stains on white fabrics can be removed with peroxide of hydrogen. Drop it on the stain with a medicine dropper or, if it is a large spot, pour it on slowly from a spoon. As this preparation has a bleaching effect, great care must be exercised if used on colored materials.

READ THE PROGRESS

IN THE LION'S DEN

By GRACE R. OLIN.

(©, 1919, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Lucille, I think you are carrying this affair a little too far." Lucille's father frowned upon her from the depths of his great office chair, and Uncle Rob, her father's brother and partner, frowned a bit himself.

"I quite agree with you in this, John," he said. Of course, the office force might have quaked, or the world of business men been disconcerted, for the firm of Spencer & Spencer were pretty big men and their word carried considerable weight. However, Lucille appeared not to be affected greatly; she gazed down at her slim ankles and smothered a yawn as if a trifle bored.

"Father," her eyes looked into his serenely, "I can't see why you object to Mr. Carter, and besides he's so different from all the rest."

"Different!" John Spencer's tone was almost exasperated. "I can't see wherein he's different. He is simply the fourth ex-soldier your Red Cross work gave you a personal interest in. For each of the four you appealed to me to give them a position. I crowded Carter in rather than disappoint you, though I didn't need him."

"Like the others three, he thanks me by making love to my daughter. The others, although they amused you for a while, soon wearied you, but this fellow evidently possesses some added charm, for you accept his attentions gladly, to all appearances."

"But, father," Lucille was persistent, "Mr. Carter is so different.

"His salary is $25 per, just what the others got," threw in Uncle Rob dryly. "Wouldn't keep you in hats, even."

"He'll get to the top all right," defended Lucille. "You 'lions' in the business world certainly make me tired. You cheer the boys for their valor in fighting. They win the war for you and come back, looking for jobs. They may get the jobs, but right there the heretofore bravos cease. No matter what their heroism, what their sacrifice, the danger past, they are just the poorer class, the class your daughters needn't associate with."

"Lucille," Mr. John Spencer looked somewhat hurt. "Your uncle and I have been in the business a long time. We have struggled and worked hard and kept our noses to the grindstone for years. If we have won the title of 'lions,' we deserve it."

"Hero stuff is all right, but it doesn't pay the rent nor buy groceries, does it? Why, Carter has had two chances to go with other firms. He's a bright fellow, and there is a $5 raise in each case. But, no, the other men didn't have daughters."

"I tell you what I suggested to your father." Uncle Rob leaned over to pat the little hand resting on his desk. "I suggested letting Carter go; not throwing him out without a job, but forcing one of his recent offers upon him."

Her father turned suddenly and pressed a certain button on his desk. "Send Carter in," he said to the red-haired office boy. And the next moment a tall, well-built young man crossed the threshold. "Good morning, Daniel," called Lucille, cheerily.

"Why, Lucille," the young man's face lighted up wonderfully.

"Carter!" John Spencer stopped him with a gesture ere he could cross to Lucille's side. "Just a moment, please; I want a word with you."

"Certainly." Carter stopped courteously by his employer's desk.

"I'm not at all satisfied, young man. I'm going to let you go. Of course, I will see that you get another position; that is understood, but I don't think you have played square with me. Speak out like a man. Do you?"

For an instant Carter's grave blue eyes registered amusement, then he drew himself up soberly.

"I haven't played square with you, sir," he answered. "Of course I've been very honest with your daughter, but my year in the trenches taught me a valuable lesson. You see, 'lions' and German foxes must be approached with caution and a cunning to match their own.

"When I first met Lucille, and found out that you were her father, I realized that if you knew my uncles were Carter & Carter, your most bitter rivals and contestants for the 'lionship honors,' I would have to go slow.

"Lucille and I thought if I could establish myself in your good graces that would be, of course, the first step. Needless to say, my uncles want me with them, especially now as I have some methods of yours to introduce."

"Don't be alarmed, sirs," as Spencer & Spencer clutched at their collars convulsively. "I have drawn up papers ready for your signature, which admit me into the firm. And now, if you'll pardon us, Lucille and I will run off to lunch. Don't forget the papers you are sure to sign, gentlemen. You know, I shall belong to the house, and a house divided against itself shall fall."

Lucille came over softly and put her smooth cheek against her father's.

"Father, you and Uncle Rob know the story about 'Daniel in the lion's den,' don't you?" she asked innocently.

Spencer and Spencer exchanged glances. "Yes, I reckon I remember, all right," Mr. John Spencer assured her; "The mouths of the lions were stopped, if my memory is correct."

The other member of the firm, Mr. Robert Spencer, extended his hand to young Carter, and with the other tilted Lucille's chin.

"Daniel was some boy," he remarked.

In Many Cases Hard To Tell From New Going Out At Low Prices

In the course of my business I have gathered a lot of stoves. These I have rebuilt. A new door here, new bricks there—in many cases it's hard to tell these stoves from new ones.

Why don't you come and look them over? The one at home may be past repair—new stoves are at prices nearly prohibitive — and there's many a year of service to be gotten out of these.

Prices are "Hoffman prices." That assures you a lower price than usual.
